

5 TIPS FOR TEACHING YOUR CHILDREN ABOUT SUKKOT

Getting the whole family involved in teaching your children about Sukkot brings the reality of God's provision and protection to your children. They need to know, feel, and see what God has for them.

READ A BOOK

Reading a book to your children not only fosters your relationship with them, but also grows their minds. Find a book that explains why the feast is an appointed time and how to celebrate it, connecting them to the roots of their faith.

BUILD A SUKKAH

Building a sukkah is a traditional way to observe and celebrate Sukkot. Building a sukkah connects them to the act of renewing their covenant with the Lord. Gather in the sukkah as a family and renew your covenants with each other.

HAVE A MEAL

Mealtime is a blessing. Whether it is during the Sabbath or a yearly Feast of the Lord, the time is designed by God to be a demonstration of abundance, blessing, provision, and covenant. You can have your meal in the sukkah and make it an experience they will never forget.

GIVE AN OFFERING

Giving honors the Lord and helps children remember His provision. Sowing into spiritually rich soil during appointed times provides a return of a hundred, sixty, or thirtyfold. This teaches them biblical finance principles.

DO A CRAFT

Kids love crafts. They help children better retain and understand the concept that's being taught. Try making a candy sukkah! Much like a gingerbread house, a candy sukkah allows your children to have fun building a structure out of candy, frosting, and graham crackers.
